President's Message

Greetings, members of the West Jamaica Conference!

It is a joy and privilege to once again remind you of the integral role that the West Weekly Newsletter plays in our ministry. I want to challenge and encourage you to keep your focus on this vital channel of communication, as it is through this medium that we will share many of the key activities and updates across our conference.

I also encourage you to keep the mission at the forefront of all you do. We know the Lord is coming soon, and we are called by God to declare this Everlasting Gospel to the world. May the Lord bless and keep you as we together pursue His mission.

FLANKER SDA CHURCH HONORS LIVING PIONEERS DURING 60TH ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATIONS

By Shantel Neal | West Jamaica Conference

FLANKER, ST. JAMES — Celebrating six decades of ministry under the theme "Built By Faith, Growing in Grace," the Flanker Seventh-day Adventist Church marked its Diamownd Anniversary with a series of commemorative events highlighting the congregation's humble beginnings, spiritual growth, and community impact.

The weeklong celebration, spanning October 3 to 11, ww2026, encompassed a dynamic schedule including an Evening Road March, Community Health Focus Day, nightly revival services, a Meet & Greet at Harmony Park, and a grand 60th Anniversary Award Banquet at the Royalton Hotel in Trelawny. The emotional centerpiece of the anniversary was a special tribute honoring the church's early pioneers—specifically highlighting two living founding stalwarts still present in the congregation: Sister Esmina Edwards ("Sister Eddie") and Sister Sonia Gordon.

A Legacy Built Under Open Trees

Sixty years ago, the Flanker congregation was born out of vision, faith, and manual labor, transitioning from open-air worship under trees to zinc-and-board structures, and ultimately to its current permanent sanctuary. Initiated in 1958 when two young missionaries—Brother Herbert Walker and Brother Kenneth Spence—were sent into the White House and Flanker communities by Montego Bay Adventist Pastor Noel Fraser, the daughter congregation was officially organized in 1966.

Among the foundational believers honored, Sister Esmina Edwards was recognized as one of the church's steadiest hands and earliest leaders. Serving as the leader of the Dorcas Welfare Ministry, Sister Edwards—a skilled dressmaker—personally sewed clothing to sell at half price, reinvesting all proceeds into feeding and clothing impoverished local families. Beyond her community welfare work, she lifted her voice alongside Brother Spence's handheld accordion in early open-air meetings, eventually becoming choir director and establishing the church's long-standing music tradition.

Equally celebrated was Sister Sonia Gordon, whose dedication to the church began in childhood before she was old enough to hold an official church office. As a young girl growing up in Flanker, Sister Gordon would run straight from school every Friday evening and return early Saturday mornings to clear brush and goat pens from the rough land on which the sanctuary now stands. Her childhood spirit of dependability carried into adulthood, where she served for decades as the church's treasurer.

"Standing Before You is a Miracle"

The presentation held special significance for Pastor Corben Crew, a "son of the soil" whose own Christian journey and decades-long gospel ministry were birthed through the persistence of these very pioneers. Delivering a moving reflection, Pastor Crew expressed profound gratitude for the living legacy of Sister Eddie and Sister Gordon.

"Standing before you is a miracle because the two individuals you are now honoring are two individuals that I came here and found in the church," Pastor Crew shared.

Recalling his youth in upper Flanker, Pastor Crew admitted that as a boy, he initially resisted the church's outreach efforts and even teased members as they walked through the community singing Christmas carols.

"To be honest with you, I didn't love the Adventist church... But they persistently came, they persistently prayed, they persistently witnessed until my stubborn head started getting enlightened," Pastor Crew recalled.

"Those of you who are helping people, don't just help and when they drive you away, you go away. Stay there. Because she stayed there, maybe that's the reason I am even alive now. Because the individuals that I used to hang out with, most of them are gone."

Remembering the Foundation

In addition to Sister Edwards and Sister Gordon, the anniversary service paid homage to a long list of pioneers, clergy, and early believers who anchored the work. Notably, citations were read for several stalwart members and pastors who served the church with distinction throughout the years. Pastors recognized and pinned during the award service included Pastor Wilton Bygrave, Pastor Deron Miller, Pastor Corben Crew, Pastor Donovan Williams (Vice President of the West Jamaica Conference), Pastor LC Thomas, Pastor Conrad Duncan (Vice President for General Administration and Director of Stewardship and Disaster Response Ministry in the Florida Conference), and Pastor Chadrick Cunningham, their current district pastor

"It is an honor to build on the foundation of sacrifice and dedication set by Flanker Church's early leaders," shared Pastor Cunningham. "For 60 years, by God's grace, this church has served as a beacon of hope—transforming lives, meeting community needs, and leading many to Jesus Christ."

Former district pastors Pastor Wilton Bygrave and Pastor Deron Miller, along with current district Pastor Chadrick Cunningham, stand together at Flankers SDA Church holding commemorative plaques recognizing their dedicated service and honoring the church's founding pioneers.

Pastor Vincent Rose, President of the West Jamaica Conference, commended the dedicated efforts of the members, leaders, and ministers during the opening Friday evening vespers charge. He emphasized that the church has served as the vital "salt of the earth" that preserved the Flanker community, noting that while the conference deeply appreciates their past contributions, much work still lies ahead under God's guidance.

As its Diamond Anniversary concludes, the Flanker Seventh-day Adventist Church looks forward with the same faith that built its foundation 60 years ago and birthed congregations like Providence Heights—remaining a sanctuary of hope, growth, and service for generations to come.

ADVENTIST RELIGIOUS FREEDOM ADVOCATE CHALLENGES BYU RESEARCHERS TO COUNT THE COST OF RELIGIOUS DISCRIMINATION

Nigel Coke, former Public Affairs and Religious Liberty Director for the Seventh-day Adventist Church in Jamaica, challenges researchers to count the cost of religious discrimination.

By Theodore Henry, East Jamaica Conference | JAMU Communications

The call was the centerpiece of Coke's address on interfaith respect and pluralism delivered at BYU, titled "The Architecture of Pluralism: Legal Neutrality and Grassroots Literacy – Why Separation of Church and State Is Necessary but Not Sufficient for Interfaith Respect."

"Much research may have been done on the spiritual, economic, and social fallout of a country that practices religious discrimination," said Nigel Coke, former Public Affairs and Religious Liberty Director of the Seventh-day Adventist Church in Jamaica. "But today I challenge the BYU researchers to examine the financial and mental health impact it has on individual families."

He was speaking at the 33rd Annual International Law and Religious Liberty Symposium organized by BYU from October 4 – 6, 2026, under the theme "Building an Infrastructure for Freedom of Religion or Belief"

Coke, who was the only Jamaican and Seventh-day Adventist among multiple religions in attendance, posited that religious discrimination "has no face; it can affect anyone, regardless of race, class, religion, or ethnicity."

He called for data that goes beyond standard statistics on where persecution exists to document what happens inside households when faith is criminalized or stigmatized. He argued that a father who loses his job due to religious discrimination can have a devastating effect on the family, especially if he is the breadwinner. Effects could range from mortgage holders taking the house his family lives in to possible suicide.

Participants in a panel discussion on interfaith respect for religious pluralism: (L-R) Neil Lindberg, Senior Fellow, International Center for Law and Religion Studies, J. Reuben Clark Law School, BYU. Nigel Coke, Former Public Affairs and Religious Liberty Director of the Seventh-day Adventist Church in Jamaica, Mohamed Bahr, Head of Strategic Planning, Muslim Council of Elders, United Arab Emirates, and Suvra Dev Kar, Human Rights Activist, Bangladesh.

Religious Pluralism Has Two Pillars

Framing the address with Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s words from 1963, "Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere," Coke stated, "When we tolerate it anywhere — in a constitution that favors one faith and teaches contempt for another — we jeopardize justice everywhere."

Coke's presentation outlined pluralism as a building needing two pillars. One is built by lawyers, the other by teachers. Without either, the building collapses.

"Pillar One is legal neutrality, often understood as separation of church and state. When the state acts as guardian of one religion, even culturally, pluralism becomes difficult, and inequality dominates," Coke argued.

"The state cannot be both a player and a referee; separation does not mean hostility toward religion. It means the state creates a neutral space where no religion needs permission from another to exist."

Without that neutral space, interfaith dialogue "becomes theater," Coke said. "We shake hands on stage while the law off stage has already chosen a winner," he explained.

Pillar Two, Coke said, is grassroots literacy — and where current interfaith work is failing. While interfaith education that brings different faiths together is valuable, what is more urgently needed is intra-faith education for interfaith respect.

"Intra-faith means let me teach my members what our own religion says about how we must treat you when we believe you are wrong."

He said, "Somewhere in our global sphere, Christians, Adventists, Muslims, Hindus, and Rastafari live on the same street. The problem is not that they don't know each other exists; it is what they were taught on their day of worship about that existence."

Coke warned that children may leave Sabbath School, Sunday School, or Madrasa with two lessons: "We are right, and therefore they deserve our contempt," adding that the second lesson was not in our holy texts but was added.

Three corrections were proposed: first, separate disagreement from disrespect; second, teach each tradition's own texts on respect for neighbor and stranger as doctrine, not an optional extra; and third, stop teaching caricatures of other faiths.

Drawing on Seventh-day Adventist teaching, Coke noted that the church upholds religious freedom for all, that "God accepts only homage that is freely given," and that the law must be applied evenly.

Coke's address concluded with a dual call for lawmakers to be neutral in that the state must not be a theologian. It must be a guardian of space, and that pastors, imams, rabbis, priests, and teachers should be faithful in their teachings, but also teach what their own faith commands about how to treat those they believe are false.

The symposium brought together more than 200 attendees from over 50 countries across Europe, Asia, the Middle East, Africa, the Pacific, North and South America, the United States, and the Caribbean. Attendees include religious liberty experts, scholars, the legal fraternity, religious leaders, public and government officials, and advocates.

NEWS FROM THE INTER-AMERICAN DIVISION

First online meetup features inspiring testimonies and practical opportunities to use creative talents to share Jesus.

October 25, 2026 | Miami, Florida, United States | Libna Stevens, Inter-American Division News

The Seventh-day Adventist Church in Inter-America brought together digital content creators, young people and church members for its first Creative Disciples Online Meetup on October 22, aiming to inspire participants to use their talents to share Jesus, build a community of faith-driven creators and encourage greater participation in the church's mission.

Streamed live from the Inter-American Division (IAD) headquarters in Miami, Florida, the gathering formed part of preparations for OneVoice27, a worldwide evangelistic initiative that will mobilize church members through digital outreach and local congregations in 2027.

Abel Márquez, IAD communication director, welcomed participants alongside Keila Trejo, IAD community manager, and Pastor Daniel Torreblanca, IAD youth ministries director.

"This project does not belong to the communication department, the youth ministries department or the stewardship department," Márquez said. "It is an initiative of the entire Inter-American Division in which everyone can participate."

Márquez explained that creative discipleship extends beyond traditional preaching to using innovative approaches and personal abilities to introduce others to Jesus.

"Mission is not ours. Mission belongs to God," he said. "He invites us to participate, and we, as disciples, join in His mission."

Trejo encouraged participants to connect with one another as viewers introduced themselves through the YouTube live chat.

Digital Creators Share Their Experiences

Salim Bencosme, a content creator from the Dominican Republic, described how he began sharing biblical messages on social media six years ago to reach audiences beyond traditional church settings.

"God placed in my heart the desire to take the truths we shared from the pulpit to social media," Bencosme said.
He encouraged viewers to become digital missionaries and join OneVoice27.

"You can become a useful instrument for God so that people may know that Jesus is coming soon," he said.

From Ibagué, Colombia, Diana Cedano shared how she and her husband have combined their beauty business with digital evangelism, initially sharing Christian literature and personal testimonies with clients before expanding to Instagram, Facebook and TikTok.

Cedano said their account has attracted nearly 14,000 followers, generating prayer requests and messages from viewers in different countries, including individuals seeking connections with nearby Adventist congregations. The couple has since dedicated more time to producing faith-based content and supporting local Adventist institutions.

"It is not about followers or likes. It is about what is in your heart and your purpose in appearing on a screen," Cedano said. "Do you want people to see you, or do you want them to see Jesus?"

The meetup also highlighted efforts in the French Antilles–Guiana Union, where communication director Cedric Adrassé reported that approximately 30 people attended a recent meeting to identify volunteers interested in digital evangelism.

"REBUILDING THE BOND,RENEWING THE SPIRIT"

BY DR. BALVIN BRAHAM,

DID YOU KNOW?

Did you know that despite opposition and broken walls, God always provides dedicated builders to restore our spiritual identity, community bonds, and mission?

In his sermon "Rebuilding the Bond, Renewing the Spirit," Dr. Balvin Braham draws a powerful parallel between Nehemiah's calling to rebuild Jerusalem's fallen walls and the modern imperative to restore the church and Northern Caribbean University. He emphasizes that while physical structures may crumble, our true walls represent our spiritual integrity, unity of purpose, and shared commitment to the gospel message. Amid personal loss, societal hardships, and institutional challenges, Dr. Braham urges believers to keep their spirits alive, put aside past hurts and divisions, and unite in prayer and purposeful action to fulfill the Seventh-day Adventist Church's core mission of preparing lives for the second coming of Jesus Christ. To achieve this restoration, Dr. Braham highlights the necessity of collective effort, resilience, and an unshakeable focus on Christ rather than external legalism or secular pursuits. Just as Nehemiah's builders labored with commitment and watchfulness, members, staff, students, and leaders are called to stand on the wall together—building a "smart campus" grounded in both physical excellence and spiritual truth. By pressing forward through opposition and embracing initiatives like the Jamaica Union's RESET and global outreach, the church and university community can effectively rebuild broken bonds, nurture every individual's spirit, and share the hope of eternal life with a world in need.
